

Parents are waking up to the dangers of today's sex education. They need solid, Bible-based resources to help protect their children from the confusion surrounding gender and sexuality.

My Child, My Chance sounds the alarm about the gender and sexual identity ideology embedded in today's public education. It exposes how from kindergarten through high school, children are being taught to consider their gender as fluid and their sexuality as beyond their control. Stigma, culture, religion, media, stereotypes, homophobia, self-image, and self-awareness are identified in public school curriculum as barriers to accepting all forms of gender identity and sexuality. In reading My Child, My Chance, you will come to recognize the approach taken to tackle and topple these barriers one by one. You will see how a child's sense of identity can be eroded, affecting who they believe themselves to be.

Using Ontario's curriculum as a case-in-point, My Child, My Chance serves as a guide for parents in any region of Canada or the United States. Breaking down the harmful messages that dominate the curriculum and culture, it equips parents to recognize the strategies and ideologies that put their children at risk. In the process, parents will find that God's Word is still living and active as it applies to culture and the issues they face today.

As Followers of Jesus, we have reason to hope. Though the cultural seas storm, our Anchor holds fast. Sue navigates through these deep, uncharted waters with truth and grace. I know Sue. She and her family worship weekly and serve diligently. She is a faithful Follower who loves God, loves people, and is concerned both for the Church and the society in which we live. Her research is deep and her love is wide. This book will not only open your eyes, but will also open your heart with God's love.

Terry Ciona, Lead Pastor,
Pleasant Valley Community Church,
Brantford, Ontario

Susan Zuidema is an elementary school teacher in Ontario, Canada, where she and her husband are raising their three children. Susan is both deeply motivated and well-positioned to address the controversial 2015 Ontario Health and Physical Education curriculum. Compelled to speak the truth as found in God's Word, she is also passionate about the people God created in His own image, particularly children. As such, she strives to live and speak from the place where grace meets truth. Susan graduated in 1996 from Moody Bible Institute (Chicago) with a BA in Evangelism and Discipleship and received her B.Ed. from Wilfrid Laurier University (Waterloo) in 2007.

www.mychildmychance.com